ALII SUNDAYS by Pat Rivera

"PAGEANTRY EVOKING Hawaii's past is predictable at cultural, government and social events today, but it was rare when, 40 years ago, the late Rev. Abraham Akaka came up with the idea of Alii Sunday. "

"It was when the so-called Hawaiian Renaissance was coming to life and Hawaiian leaders talked about wanting more visibility," said the Rev. William Kaina, like Akaka a former Kawaiahao pastor. "He invited them to come to church."

Hawaii's monarchy is remembered nowadays in other venues -- including politically charged demonstrations staged at Iolani Palace across the way -- but the peaceful, dignified Kawaiahao tradition continues as a mainstay in marking Hawaiian pride. "

So begins the article written by Mary Adamski on March 31, 2001 in the Honolulu Star Bulletin on Ali'i Sunday at Kawaiahao Church. She was impressed with the dignity and pride she observed as the royal societies and more than 200 members of other Hawaiian organizations, including the Hawaiian Civic Club of Honolulu, processed solemnly into the church to honor our ali'i.

Ali'i Sunday and the procession of Hawaiian organizations proclaims in a dignified, dynamic way that our heritage is alive. On Ali'i Sunday, Kawaiahao Church becomes a time and a place where we can walk in remembrance of the Hawaiian Kingdom and know, firsthand, what it means to be a Hawaiian who remembers the past yet lives in the present. Please join us in proclaiming our heritage on August 24, 2008 at 8:00am at Kawaiahao Church when we will honor Queen Lili'uokalani.
